

Short Curriculum Vitae

Sidira Marianthi

Sidira Marianthi was born in Alexandroupolis, Greece and graduated from the Department of Agricultural Development (Division Food Science and Technology), Democritus University of Thrace, Greece (2007). She obtained a PhD in Food Biotechnology at the Department of Chemistry, University of Patras, Greece (2014). Her PhD thesis was focused on the Development of meat products using novel technological methods, and project funded by Research Funding Program: Heracleitus II. During her post graduate studies 13 research articles as well as 4 articles in books were published and a patent was granted. Following her PhD, she worked as a Postdoctoral Researcher studying the functional dairy and meat products with high added value fermented or enriched with new probiotic microorganisms isolated from Greek traditional products. Afterwards she joined Macedonian Thrace Brewery SA, being responsible for the new R&D projects of the company. In 2018 she moved to Pharmathen SA where she is currently the R&D Compliance Officer of the R&D Department. She is a Sessional Lecturer (Course: Principles of Entrepreneurship in Biosciences) at the Department of Molecular Biology & Genetics, Democritus University of Thrace in Alexandroupolis, Greece.